

Institute for Environmental studies is holding a course of Agro-environmental schemes and its effect on nature in Europe

led by dr. Simon R. Mortimer (University of Reading, UK)

8.-11.2.2011

The course will be proceed within a lecture no. MO550P06E Hot topic of environmental sciences scheduled in the WINTER SEMESTER!!

If you are interested in this course don't forget to register to a lecture no. MO550C06E in the winter semester to deliver credits for it.

The course is open to all students from UK or other institutions.

During the course will addressed questions such as:

What the agriculture do to nature?

How the modification of agriculture practices can affect nature ?

How we can affect agriculture by economic tools ?

Agroenvironmental schemes and its outcome in varous EU countries.

For more information on dr. Mortimer see http://www.reading.ac.uk/caer/staff_simon_mortimer.html